A HISTORY

Paris, Texas, Paris, Texas
Source: A.C. Greene

Few American cities have been able to preserve their built environment and at the same time expand as modern communities. Paris, Texas is among those fortunate few, not only surviving but preserving its civic character through fires, tornadoes, the Depression's '30s and the urban movement of the '40s and '50s – any of which could have closed the books on its municipal vitality.

Paris is where it is because of the Red River. Although boating the Red was uncertain and risky, it was done with regularity. Travis Wright, brother of George Wright, the founder of Paris, scheduled steamers to Wright's Landing. In the front yard of Kiomatia Plantation, Paris shipped and received goods in quantity via the river for over 40 years, and the Ames Tool Co., which made wooden handles, boxes, and crates, kept a steam packet on the river until the 20th century.

But there is another river-oriented aspect of Paris' location. The river, any river, of the 19th century days represented sickness: agues, chills, fevers, and malaria. Our forefathers didn't connect these plagues with the mosquito but they did connect them with the river bottoms. Paris was deliberately located on a divide between the Red and Sulphur rivers, a ridge reaching 620 feet – not spectacular, but 50 to 200 feet above the nearby land and high enough to catch breezes which discouraged mosquitoes.

"...Few American cities have been able to preserve their built environment and at the same time expand as modern communities."

The land that would become Lamar County had several permanent residents by 1837 when Claiborne Chisum bought a large tract which today lies in west Paris. George Wright, who had come to the Red River Valley in 1816 as a 17 year old with his father, Claiborne, bought one thousand acres of the Larkin Rattan headright survey in 1839 and opened a store on that ridge.

Paris did not go through an uncertain period of frontier isolation. By the time it was formally established and made county seat in 1844, adjoining territory was settling up and marauding Indians had been pushed westward. Paris was founded, and mostly settled by people familiar with the region. Unlike Dallas and Fort Worth, for instance, the men who conceived and planned the original town had lived in the vicinity for years. Early leaders such as the Wrights, the Chisums, and Epps Gibson, knew about the soils, the surroundings, even the weather. They knew what to expect, as well as what not to expect.

Unlike most Texas towns, Paris looked north rather than south and west for expansion and trade. The Red River was the border between the Republic of Texas and the United States, and it also formed the boundary between the Anglo colony in Texas and the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, removed via the infamous "Trail of Tears," from several southern states. It is easy to forget today, that these Indians were not wild plains nomads. They were part of the "civilized tribes" and were independent nations, recognized as such by the United States. Many tribal members were, by white standards, well educated and some were quite wealthy. From its outset Paris benefited from the commerce which flowed across the river and the services the Nations required. This huge market at its front door made the early progress of Paris easier. It didn't have to struggle to survive. Within a decade of its founding Paris had outstripped the older, more firmly entrenched Clarksville, to the east; and from a 10 year period after 1889, Paris was also the legal headquarters with the U.S. District Court for the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations and westward in non-Indian Oklahoma. The U.S. courthouse in Paris was not only one of the most imposing structures in North Texas, it was among the busiest in the Southwest, handling all Indian trials and lawsuits which were not based on tribal law. Nine men were hanged in its courtyard during that decade.

Paris almost from its beginning was a separate sphere, unlike the surrounding region; more southern than western, and thanks to its merchants, more urban than rural, even though King Cotton ruled. Despite being the original Texas home and burial place of John Chisum, one of the great ranching names of Texas history, Paris was never a cattle town. It was, after all, begun by a merchant and a politician, merchant Wright having been elected to the Texas Congress several times.

The new city quickly experienced an influx of merchants from Doaksville and Fort Towson, across the river. This helped Paris not only to survive but – despite the importance of cotton –

"...The square, or plaza as it came to be known, has always been the historic heart of Paris."

never to become dependent on any single crop, industry, or commercial undertaking. What all this meant, prior to the Civil War, was that the town filled a commercial and industrial role unlike its agrarian neighbors. By 1860 a state business census showed that the Lamar County millers and furniture makers made the county a "high wage" industrialized region (by the standards of the day) which meant it had lots of skilled craftsmen and tradespeople. In the late 1850s, other cultural and social elements were added. Jewish families began arriving, and several wealthy, well-educated Kentucky families migrated to Paris during the period and immediately became civic leaders. These included Rice Maxey and his son Sam Bell, and Eben LaFayette Dohoney.

The flowering of Parisian culture began in the 1870s when all sorts of newspapers and journals were published espousing all kinds of interests and views. One of the more interesting of these was Common Sense, published by Richard Peterson, a theater owner and an avowed atheist. Convinced a doctor's ice pack treatment had killed his young son, Peterson had "Frozen to Death" chiseled on the boy's gravestone in Evergreen Cemetery. The grave of Willet Babcock, also in Evergreen Cemetery, is nationally famous for its statue of "Jesus" in cowboy boots. Paris early established itself as home to several brilliant and/or erratic thinkers, "characters" perhaps, but with enough financial security for them to survive socially while marching to a different drummer. William

I. McDonald, a bachelor lawyer and moneylender, moved to Paris from Clarksville in 1887 to open his third bank (later the First National). McDonald took an enormous interest in astronomy, and on his death left the bulk of his large estate to the University of Texas (which he never attended) to build an observatory. After a court battle with heirs that took place in the Lamar County Courthouse in Paris, the University of Texas got its funds and McDonald Observatory in the Davis Mountains was built.

But the most profound influence on Paris – the city that was to a great extent the city that still exists – came from cotton. The importance of its role in making Paris Paris cannot be overemphasized. Cotton brought wealth to Paris. Cotton gave the small town a world outlook, and it created a class of citizens, who while not elitist in the current, political use of the word, were capable of making cultural and artistic decisions of community importance and backing them up, regardless of the size of community support.

Their descendants still remain, and in some cases, continue to play valuable and social roles with independent views and lifestyles.

Cotton, in its day, was as much a cultural dictator as it was economic, and Paris became a gilded branch of the Cotton Kingdom: elite, well-positioned, and guided by its ideas and cultural institutions more often than its agricultural situation. The cotton buyers and the cotton factors, who represented various out of town buyers, told the farmers what they would do, not vice versa. The surviving homes of that period evidence a concern with show and beauty before usefulness or function. There is an architecturally expressed desire to display and mark achievement.

An important side asset to Paris, as a result of its being a great inland cotton marketing center, was that several English families moved there in the 1880s. They created an cosmopolitan atmosphere in the small town and turned its attention to Europe as a source of ideas, so that a bit later when the wives of the wealthy were decorating their homes, a good many of them went to Europe to do so.

But there were other cotton marketing centers – Dallas, of course, or Waco. Why is it today, years after its time as such a center, Paris still carries benefits and traces from the great cotton years which ended with U.S. government support payments and marketing rules in the 1930s? The most reasonable answer is that Paris did not hit oil and thereby make the drastic swerve in civic life that took place in towns like Kilgore, Tyler, and Longview which lost their past when they gained oil. There was no sudden substitution of one basic income with its way of life for another. Paris found new sources of economic growth. Camp Maxey's location during the 1940s formed a bridge over the troubled waters that swept so many smaller cities' inhabitants seeking World War II job opportunities after the Depression decade.

1908 marked the appearance of J.L. Wees, a European trained architect, who was brought to Paris to design an elaborate home for investor Rufus Scott. Wees later moved to Paris and almost singlehandedly established the standard for its architecture and public spaces after the disastrous 1916 fire.

Another individual whose mark remains deeply engraved on the everyday face of the city was J.I. Culbertson, a pioneer of cotton oil milling in the south. He was owner of the Southland Oil plant in Paris as well as 34 other mills and various holdings in Oklahoma – he gave the land for the Oklahoma capitol and kept a home in Oklahoma City as well as Paris. But while Culbertson was wealthy enough to indulge personal plans to their fullest – his 1921 home has a swimming pool in the basement – he helped shape Paris with gifts. After land for Bywaters Park, near downtown, was given by the J.K. Bywaters family, Culbertson commissioned Wees to design the Grecian peristyle that is the park's centerpiece. The Paris Municipal Band, formed in 1923 and now the oldest municipal band in Texas, for decades has given summer concerts from the peristyle. Culbertson commissioned the elaborate Culbertson Fountain in the plaza, completed by Wees in 1927, which has earned the Paris plaza the informal designation of "prettiest in Texas," and in 1931 he donated the Wees-designed Paris Public Library to the city.

The square, or plaza as it came to be known, has always been the historic heart of Paris. In cotton days it was jammed with wagons and bales, and formed an open air curb market before the Paris Cotton Exchange was put into operation. There are reported to be cisterns containing water, measuring 15' in diameter, at the corners of the square, put there for fire protection in the days when the square was choked with cotton and cotton wagons. The terrible 1916 fire (by far the worst of three major conflagrations in the city's history) started in the southwestern edge of Paris, and swept around the square to do its costliest damage before blowing east out Pine Bluff Road to wipe out an assembly of finer homes. It cost the city a number of important and architectural landmarks, including the major office buildings, two banks, and the county courthouse. But the 1916 fire performed a bitter service: It modernized Paris and made it possible today for one to observe the place almost intact from that post-flames resurrection.

Paris is a city that has not had to make comparisons with itself. It never tried to be another Dallas, or St. Louis, its cultural mecca of other days. It hasn't tried to imitate other places. Because of its location, it was, and remains, a self-contained city with its own economic growth. Paris, today, is generally recognized around the Southwest as being a unique city, a city with its own personality. Not like other cities and not always wanting to be like another city.

The need to preserve this outlook, this attitude, this heritage and inheritance, is recognized by thoughtful citizens of today's city. The ability to utilize it as a foundation for the future is the challenge Paris faces.

HOW DID PARIS GET ITS NAME?

Would a rose by any other name still smell as sweet?

Once upon a time – actually it was around 1837 – there was a store in Northeast Texas built near a sharp curve in the road. The store was called "Pinhook," (a reference to many communities in Northeast Texas which were built around sharp curves in the road).

In 1839, George Wright came to Lamar County and purchased 1,000 acres on which he built a store. The store was located on a hill and as the nearby store was referred to as Pinhook, this hill and store were referred to as Paris.

For one reason or another, the county residents would not agree on a convenient location for their county seat. By 1844, the county seat of Lamar County had been moved to three locations. George Wright donated fifty acres around his store and hill which was elected as the new county seat of Lamar County. Naturally, this area carried the same name as that of the store and hill and in 1845, Paris (the town) was incorporated.

As for the actual naming of Paris, there is not one person, event, or document with which to attribute the honor. It is suspected that a group of men meeting in George Wright's store conversing on the topics of the day – politics, weather, economy, Indians – came out of these meetings with the new name. Such evidence shows that it was unofficially referred to as Paris by some as early as 1841.

Regardless of who named Paris Paris, one thing is certain: It was named for Paris, France, and the name has had a significant influence on the development of the city. Paris seems always to have taken sustenance from its elegant name, and though lacking the French background of New Orleans and St. Louis, has set extra high standards of civic and municipal life.

LAMAR COUNTY

Major Lamar County Cities
(Based upon population of 500 or more)

Blossom - Population 1,500, one of the oldest towns in Lamar County, was originally called "Blossom Prairie", later shortened to Blossom. Located 10 miles east of Paris, the major industry is ranching. Blossom and its surrounding area have a rich history. The Georgia Watson Library-Museum houses genealogy, history, pictures, and articles of bygone days. The Blossom Civic Center is a gathering place for family and class reunions as well as several Blossom Civic Clubs. The library and civic center, located in City Park, were built by the citizens and former citizens of Blossom, then donated to the city. Businesses are family owned and operated. The oldest one, dating back to the early 1900's, is Blossom Telephone, owned by the Dorries family since 1951. Annual events include the Blossom City Wide Garage Sale the second weekend in June, Homecoming during Labor Day weekend, and a Christmas Parade. For more information, call the Blossom Telephone Company, (903) 982-5200 or City Hall, (903) 982-5900.

Deport - Deport was originally christened "Deeville" for Col. Dee Thompson, but inhabitants persisted in associating it with the devil so the exasperated Thompson family changed the name to Deport. Located 15 miles southeast of Paris along U.S. Highway 271 and partially in Red River County. Attractions include the American Legion Post #199, a community center, library, museum, public park and walking track with a large pavilion for reunions and picnics. Deport is noted for its high sidewalks which were built in response to the constant floods that came with every rain. In 1982, a dike was finally built to protect the town from the ravages of Mustang Creek. Historical sites are compiled in a book, available for $10 at City Hall. For more information, contact Sharon Frances or Mayor Gilbert Arriaga at Deport City Hall, (903) 652-3875.

Reno - Over 2,500 people reside in Reno located just east of Paris on U.S. Highway 82. Incorporated in 1966, the slogan "People and Progress" is proven by the new businesses built in Reno in the past few years. Attractions include the Kiwanis Recreation Park and an auction held at the M & M Auction every second and fourth Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. Noted for quiet country living. For more information contact Reno City Hall, (903) 785-6581.

Roxton - Population 754. The original spelling of the name was "Rockstown", referring to the white limestone rock which underlay the foundation of the town. Located 15 minutes southwest of Paris along lovely rolling hills which lend themselves to challenging cycling tours. The main industry is agriculture (grain). A "bedroom community" of Paris, Roxton boasts an excellent school system. Annual events include a Fourth of July picnic and fireworks celebration, a Christmas parade and town garage sales. For more information call (903) 346-3355.

Effie Tower - This famous Paris landmark is located at the corner of Jefferson Rd. and South Colliette Dr., next to the Love Civic Center. Our version of the Effie Tower, standing 65 feet tall, represents a remarkable community effort. Constructed by the Boller Makers Local #902 utilizing materials, plant space, and employee time donated by Babcock and Wilcox Company, the tower stands as the impetus for Paris being designated "1995 Best Pit Stop" by the Great North American Race. It was "Texanized" with a cowboy hat in 1998.

A.M. & Welma Aikin Regional Archives - Located on the campus of Paris Junior College in the Mike Rheudasil Learning Center, (903) 784-9411. Contains the local historical archives for Lamar, Red River, Delta, and Fannin Counties. The office replica of Senator Aikin, the father of modern education in Texas, is on display as it appeared in the state capital in Austin, as well as items relating to the Senator's 46 year career in the state legislature. Open from 8-5, Monday-Thursday, 8-12 Friday.

Evergreen Cemetery - Located on S. Church St. at Jefferson Rd., has been operating since September 26, 1866, and is noted not only for its many uniquely carved headstones and monuments, but for its size (approximately 38,000 people interred). Of special note is the renowned Babcock monument, a twelve foot statue of "Jesus" with cowboy boots.

Chisum Burial Site - The 1100 block of W. Washington, marks the place where John Chisum, Texas and New Mexico cattle baron, was interred 1884 following his illness and death in Eureka Springs, Arkansas.

which houses the permanent collection of graphic art, archival photography, and American chairs. This collection includes examples from every art period and American master painters are generously represented. The pieces are arranged chronologically to present a complete history of the American art scene from Folk Art to modern and Contemporary.

Seminar and lecture facilities are available as well as outstanding library. Admission is free but by appointment only.

Paris Union Station Railroad Depot - Located at 11th S.W. and Kaufman St., this building is an outstanding example of station architecture representative of those along the Frisco Railroad Lines. The elaborate, decorative tower, the tile roofs, quality brickwork, and since removed marble wainscoting in the waiting rooms were, in part, expensive contributions to the building from the railroads, reflecting the degree of their good will toward the community of Paris. The rehabilitated building houses the Lamar County Chamber of Commerce and the research library of the Lamar County Genealogical Society.

The Wise House - 418 W. Washington, (903) 784-1484, built in 1884, this National Register property is a rare masonry interpretation of late Victorian "Queen Anne" style architecture. The estate was built for William Belford Wise, a prominent English cotton merchant. Restoration began in 1997 on the exterior and main floor of the house and carriage house, with a vision to preserve the buildings as they were designed and built. Original colors and materials were used whenever possible, with replacements being chosen to reflect styles of the late 1880's. The home and grounds are available for special events such as weddings, rehearsal dinners, and receptions.

GETTING MARRIED IN PARIS

Many people in Northeast Texas, lacking time and resources, opt for the "second largest Paris in the world" when tying the proverbial knot.

Marriage License - Filing for a license is done through the County Clerk's office located in the Lamar County Courthouse. Bring your driver's license.

Waiting Period - The State of Texas does not require a blood test prior to acquiring your license, but it does require a 72 hour waiting period after you file.

Ceremony - With over 100 churches in the Paris area, an abundance of ministers prevail. Civil ceremonies are performed by Justices of the Peace, County and District Judges.

Location - Aside from the numerous churches in town, Bywaters Park provides a beautiful setting for outdoor weddings. DeShong Chapel on the campus of Paris Junior College is also popular.

To commemorate the event pen and ink prints of the Peristyle and DeShong Chapel are available, and local artists offer prints of the Lamar County Courthouse.

Honeymoon - Contact local accommodations (page 23) for honeymoon packages.

HISTORIC PRESERVATION

A commitment to The Texas Main Street Program was established in 1981 through the National Main Street Center of the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Washington, D.C. Its primary purpose was to revitalize the central business district through restoration and reuse by assisting small cities with building design, information on marketing and management techniques, technical assistance, and the development of low interest loan programs to restore aging buildings within a city's central business district.

The City of Paris is one of five cities designated as a Texas Main Street City in 1983, one of several cities designated as a graduate city in 1997, and obtained National Main Street status in 2002.

The Paris Main Street Project is a redevelopment program designed to capitalize on the unique character of the downtown area while at the same time promoting an aggressive downtown marketing strategy, providing technical assistance to the building owners, and beautify the downtown area.

The mission of the Paris Main Street Project is carried out by staff under the direction of the Main Street Advisory Board.

Paris is proud to have three districts listed on the National Register of Historic Places. They are the Paris Commercial District, the Church Street District, and the Pine Bluff District.

Realizing the economic impact of protecting and preserving the rich heritage of Paris, the City of Paris became a Certified Local Government community in the fall of 2002. A Historic Preservation Commission has been created to further the commitment of the City.

A SHINING EFFORT

Keep Paris Beautiful is a non-profit, community based, volunteer organization dedicated to enhance and preserve the natural beauty and constructed environment of Paris and Lamar County in partnership with other public and private organizations as well as individuals in the community.

Keep Paris Beautiful - Make Lamar County Shine (KPB) was founded in the fall of 1999 as a joint effort of the Lamar County Chamber of Commerce and the City of Paris. Both entities had identified beautification of the area as a top strategic goal after much input and public comment from the citizens and businesses.

There are eight committees representing the various areas of the project: housing, beautification, education, litter prevention and cleanup, fundraising/finance, illegal dumping and enforcement, public awareness, and solid waste management.

KPB is a 501(c)(3) non-profit corporation. For more information, please contact Board Chairman Pike Burkhardt at (903) 395-4155 ext. 12 or the Lamar County Chamber of Commerce at (903) 784-2501.

recommendation. Paris Living was formed in December 2001 by a multi-cultural group of community members in an effort to combine their resources to address the housing crisis and community rehabilitation and revitalization needs of the area. Paris Living believes in taking a holistic approach to community development and hopes to be the "hub of the wheel" in the community effort to revitalize downtown neighborhoods, bringing together and working cooperatively with various groups that have expressed an interest in revitalization.

In addition to these efforts, Paris Living will provide the following products and services:

- Affordable starter homes for low to moderate income persons
- Homebuyer Education and Outreach
- Credit Counseling
- Down payment and closing cost assistance
- Post Purchase Education

At this time, Paris Living is doing strategic planning, developing aesthetically compatible housing designs, soliciting input from residents of downtown neighborhoods, conducting community planning sessions, and developing a master plan for revitalization.

- § Central location to major consumer markets and excellent transportation network.
- § Industrial parks and sites to meet the needs of both large and small industrial users.

- § Abundant water supply from Pat Mayse Lake.

All providers of financial service in Paris and Lamar County are committed to the economic growth of this area through commercial and industrial development. Paris is served by six Paris has access to two Revolving Loan Funds, the Chapman Fund and the Economic Development Administrative Revolving Loan Fund, USDA Business and Industry Loans. Lamar County is also a strategic Investment Area as designated by the State Comptroller.

As a strategic investment area, businesses in Lamar County are eligible for Investment Tax Credits, Job Creation Tax Credits, and Research and Development Tax Credits. The Paris Economic Development Corporation (PEDC) was established in 1994 to assist industry considering the Lamar County area. The PEDC offers complete site selection assistance including an array of incentives under a Flexible Incentive Plan.

Industrial Development Bonds are sometimes a viable alternative in financing industrial expansion and construction. The Paris Economic Development Corporation is available locally for this purpose.

INCENTIVES

Because of a pro-business attitude, Texas has limited the number of state controls and taxes in regulating the activities of business. This attitude is evidenced by the absence of a personal or corporate income tax, a state property tax, or a unitary form of taxation.

The same pro-choice attitude exists toward the Texas worker. The state's right-to-work law guarantees that every person has an inherent right to work and negotiate freely with their employer, either as an individual or as a group.

In addition, the City of Paris will negotiate tax abatement for new and expanding industries. The city has traditionally approved tax abatement up to 10 years.

The Texas Department of Economic Development also offers an Enterprise Zone program that allows qualifying business tax deferrals and rebates. Priority on the job training is another example of the state programs that are available through the Skills

Paris and Lamar County is a regional medical center serving citizens of Northeast Texas and Southeast Oklahoma. Leading edge medical technology in Paris has kept pace with the sophisticated medical problems facing today's society.

Continuous efforts to enhance preventive medicine play a major role for health care providers. Educational seminars, health fairs, fitness centers, medical programs, and a commitment to an informed public strengthens the concern for this region.

Paris Junior College provides educational opportunities in a variety of medical technologies in addition to one and two-year nursing degrees.

CHRISTUS St. Joseph's Health System Paris Regional Medical Center, formerly CHRISTUS St. Joseph's Health System, has provided quality health care to residents of the area since 1911.

Two campuses, St. Joseph's Medical Center North, and St. Joseph's Medical Center South, serve over 150,000 residents in a seven-county area of Northeast Texas and Southeast Oklahoma. The System offers a wide variety of acute care medical services to meet the growing needs of surrounding communities.

The medical centers are supported by more than 100 physicians representing about 25 medical specialties.

The Heart Center of CHRISTUS St. Joseph's Health System Paris Regional Medical Center is a comprehensive cardiac care program. Services include cutting-edge cardiac catheterization imaging laboratories, specially designed surgical suites with modern surgical and monitoring equipment, CVICU, telemetry and a complete program of cardiac rehabilitation. The Heart Center is located on the South Campus, 820 Clarksville St.

The Wound Care Center is an outpatient center treating patients with non-healing chronic wounds. Leading causes of chronic wounds are diabetic ulcers, venous disease, arterial disease and pressure ulcers. Chronic wounds are defined as wounds which have not significantly healed in four weeks or completely healed in eight weeks. The Wound Care Center opened in June, 1998, and is located in Pavilion II, 2870 Lewis Lane, on the North Campus.

Home Health services are provided residents of the area in the comfort of their homes. Home Health providers offer both long and short-term care for those unable to care for themselves and who require specialized medical attention.

One of the unique services of Paris Regional Medical Center's Home Health program is the Lifeline Emergency Response System. Its home-based units allow a number of older area residents to enjoy the independence of living in their homes. Each Lifeline consists of a receiver/transmitter that is connected through the telephone line. A separate device is worn around the wrist, much like a watch, or as a necklace. The transmitter, which is about the size of a half-dollar, is waterproof and can be activated at the push of a button.

Should a subscriber fall, feel faint, or need emergency attention, when activated, the emergency response unit connects to the home telephone line and will automatically call for assistance to a central monitoring service. From the central point, assistance can be notified and summoned to the Lifeline user's home. For more information, call 784-1163, from the North Campus, 865 DeShong Dr.

DUBUIS HOSPITAL OF PARIS

Dubuis Hospitals have been described as hospitals within hospitals. When health factors necessitate an extended hospital stay, long term acute care often can be a cost-effective option. As a licensed hospital within a larger host hospital, Dubuis offers the best of modern medicine with multidisciplinary team approach. Our nurse-to-patient ratio is appropriate to the types of patients requiring long term acute care, and we provide similar state of the art technology found in intensive care units. We also have rehabilitation facilities on-site and provide a full range of services, including physical, occupational, and speech therapy.

RETIREMENT LIVING IN PARIS

Gene and Ruth Ann Stallings could have retired anywhere in the world, but they chose Paris, Texas, because of its central location, cost of living, mild climate, abundance of medical facilities, and an excellent quality of life.

Networking and socializing opportunities are offered by both public and private sectors. The AARP provides monthly meetings. Several senior centers are located throughout Paris with county-wide centers growing. Active traveling groups sponsored by our hospital, banks, and churches provide added social opportunities.

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program offers enrichment through significant community service work placing a lifetime of talents, experiences, skills, and hobbies to community projects and non-profit organizations.

"PrimeTime," a program for seniors, offers a variety of activities for members, including periodic health screenings, group tours, games, and other social events. There is a nominal fee for membership. The center is located at 140 S. Collegiate Dr.

THE CHAMBER

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF LAMAR COUNTY

SERVING THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL INTERESTS OF THE LAMAR COUNTY AREA SINCE 1904.

The Chamber was a driving force in the rebuilding of Paris, Texas following the 1916 fire. It continued to promote business and agriculture in the mid-1900's and was instrumental in locating Camp Maxey in Lamar County during World War II which accommodated up to 50,000 troops.

After the army camp was closed in 1945, a group of Chamber leaders began a concentrated effort to locate industry in the Paris area. Today the manufacturing payroll is the largest in the county at $125,000,000 annually, lead by some of the top Fortune 500 companies in the United States.

The Chamber continues to promote agriculture, tourism, business, education, medical facilities, government, and the general quality of life activities that make the area attractive for the working family or as a retirement center.
